MEET BETSY PLANK

WHO IS #BETSYPLANK?

LEADER.
Betsy attained national and international stature during a distinguished 63-year career in corporate, agency and non-profit sectors. Betsy is known as the First Lady of Public Relations, because she achieved multiple firsts for women.

• First female to head a division of Illinois Bell
• First female president of the Publicity Club of Chicago and PRSA (1973)
• First person ever to receive three of PRSA’s top individual honors: The Gold Anvil Award (1977), the Paul M. Lund Public Service Award (1989) and the Patrick Jackson Award for Distinguished Service to PRSA (2001)

Her focus on others led her to become the most individually-recognized woman in the industry, a testament to the value of selflessness in professionalism.

MENTOR.
Her first mentor, Duffy Schwartz, introduced Betsy to public relations. This led Betsy to really believe in the magic of mentors. Her legacy is most visible in the public relations’ professionals, educators and students who credit her with taking the time to mentor them throughout her career.

ADVOCATE.
Betsy devoted much of her time to advancing public relations education, consistently and passionately advocating for the profession’s students.

• Co-founded Champions for PRSSA
• Co-chaired a national commission to develop guidelines for an undergraduate public relations curriculum
• Served as national advisor for PRSSA National (1981)

WHAT ARE SOME OF BETSY’S BIGGEST LESSONS?

ETHICS:
“Ethics in public relations is who you are here and now and what you do in your personal life when no one’s watching.”

MENTORSHIP:
“Mentoring is really one of the strongest ways to spell success in public relations. . . you’re never too young–or too old–to mentor others, especially students.”

LEADERSHIP:
“Public relations is a product and practice rooted in the genius of a democratic society - one of which its citizens make choices in the voting booth, marketplace & workplace, and in their everyday lives. Our mandate is to be a part of that precious process of informing, persuading, contributing to honest, ethical debate and consensus.”
